

APRIL'S LADY

She Is Fashionably Waterproofed and Sensibly.

The real April girl appears her very best when it rains. No young woman can afford to stop looking smart just on account of an occasional downpour. It used to be that even the very prettiest girl in the world looked downy in the rain, but fashion and the raincoat makers have certainly changed all of that. The April girl is one of the prettiest of the year, thanks to her infinite resources in the way of clothes for the rainy month. Her hat is the very latest style, but wrought of the finest silk tissue—entirely waterproof. The umbrella she carries appears more like a parasol. Her coat of rain-resistant cloth is cut to the latest mode, and her neat little gaiters give her an air of dressiness not at all suggestive of April's torrents and puddles.

In the present day elaboration of raincoats it is hard to draw a line of distinction between the fashionable ulster, smart waterproof, or cravenette tailor suit.

As to Proper Colors.

As to color, it is a tip and tie between the dark and the light. The latter exists in a thousand variations, nearly all springing from tan as a base, though tan as a shade has gone out. Instead there are subtle suggestions of pink and mauve in the pastel and on the other side pale olives and sage green. Among the darker coats the tone known as Oxford gray is very popular. It is quite dark—altogether beyond the steel or mouse color—and looks natty with a small turndown collar of decided check. Still darker is queen's mourning gray, in English color. But there are black raincoats to be had, too—beautiful creations in Oxford black, with a luster that belongs only to processed goods. No woman ever looks amiss in a black raincoat.

The neatest umbrellas are the dark browns, reds, and blues, which have woven into them some inconspicuous pattern. It may be a mere dot or a dash, or a narrow stripe effect, carried around in bands, but it is tasteful and relieves the monotony of the dead black rain protector. Plaid patterns are to be the vogue this year in parasols.

Any large millinery establishment will model a silk tissue hat after a design in stock, and some few keep these waterproof on hand. A plain quill is the most serviceable and sensible trimming for the rainy-day headgear.

CHARMING SILK COSTUME.

Brown Burlington was used to make the above costume, which is extremely simple but effective. The skirt is full, and finished at bottom with three deep tucks. The tucker front of bodice is all-over cream lace, outlined by a shaped piece of velvet, which meets the deep girdle of same material. Velvet also trims the unique cuffs on sleeves, and is of a contrasting shade of brown.

It Is to Laugh.

Health, an English publication, says: "It is good to laugh. There is probably not the remotest corner or little inlet of the minute blood vessels of the body that does not feel some wavelet from the great convulsion produced by hearty laughter shaking the central man. The blood moves more rapidly—probably its chemical, electric, vital condition is distinctly modified, it conveys a different impression to all the organs of the body as it visits them on that particular mystic journey when the man is laughing from what it does at other times. The time may come when physicians shall prescribe to a listless, torpid patient so many peals of laughter to be undergone at such and such a time."

FOR more than 100 years—26 administrations—we have had the patronage of those closely identified with the highest official and social life of the capital and country.
